This call for contributions aims to enrich academic and practical discussions around the role of industrial relations in implementing vigilance and due diligence mechanisms in global supply chains, and to stimulate debate during the Summer School from 16 to 19 September 2025.

PROPOSED TOPICS

Contributions may be based on case studies, comparative analyses, theoretical reflections, or empirical research, and may address the following questions in particular:

- Involvement of Social Partners:
To what extent have social partners — especially worker representatives — been involved in the development and implementation of vigilance plans?
- Emergence of Social Dialogue Practices:
Has the implementation of due diligence led to the emergence of new, possibly innovative, social dialogue practices at the company or sectoral level?
- Company Institutions:
Which company-level social dialogue institutions have played a role in implementing due diligence?
- Good Practices and National Structures:
Are there examples of good practices or national tripartite institutions of social dialogue that have proven particularly effective in this context?
